A loud hush fell over the town of Coyote Valley as the still wind blew in from the east as the fading dawn brought light to main street. Gunfighters, desperados, gamblers, and carpet baggers had assembled in the town of Coyote Valley following the gold and silver bust in the Sierra's. Most of the new arrivals were chomping at the bit for pay back. Not only had their luck run out in the mines but the new owners of the Gouge Eye Saloon were looking to cash in on their tax assessment problem – or have that no good Rowdy Yates shot until dead (he was already hung once and that did not take), and hang the tax assessor.

The new owners of the Gouge Eye, who go by Jasper, and Dice, were not only in trouble with the law but a new saloon opened up in the Coyote Valley promising good whiskey and honest women (or was it honest whiskey and good women?). This new establishment, the Dirty Dog Doug House of Pleasure, promised to rid the territory of disrespectful establishments like the Gouge Eye.

Be that as it may the new owners promised to keep the Gouge Eye open despite the frivolous lawsuits and slanderous allegation. In fact they noted that profits were up since selling surplus whiskey to the Dirty Dog's saloon. With the tension between the two Saloons and the influx of desperados in the little town no one noticed that four gunfighters of the female persuasion rode into town. These cowgirls were not ones to be messed with, with .45's strapped to their hips the ladies dismounted in front of the Gouge Eye and strode into the Saloon.

The rowdy crowd fell silent at the entry of the damsels and some of the cowboys made the mistake of cat-calling the ladies and inviting them to dance. In a flash six shooters were brandished and lead and smoke filled the air. When the smoke cleared the saloon had cleared out and the three ladies went up to the bar and ordered their drinks.

The three ladies were Ready & Able Annie, Querida, Slo Mo Steph and Aurora Borealice and they were not to be trifled with and their intentions were clear – to run the town of Coyote Valley. After the smoke clear the three cowgirls had dominated the shooting and finished in the top three.

TRES PINOS OPENS NEW SALOON - FIRST NIGHT A BLAST!!

Stage one

The grand opening of Tres's Liquor Emporium pretty much went off without a hitch except for the minor shoot-out between two of the patrons. It seems that Lefty Eastman and Elk Butt had a disagreement over the proper way to mix a Gouge Eye Grog. After numerous attempts to perfect the mixture, and no apparent success the hoglegs came out and the shooting started. Well thanks to the Grogs none of the lead hit anything important.

Top shooter was Tully Mars, followed by Lucas and Sand Dab Sam.

SLO MO CONFRONTS BANK ROBBERS!!!

Stage two

One usually is in no danger being alone on Main Street in the town of Coyote Valley. But on this past Sunday morning Slo Mo stood face to face with 38 of the most vicious, nasty, cruel, evil treacherous, unscrupulous, and bad men in the territory (they may have been from Nevada). With only her shotgun, sixguns and 73, Slo Mo gave them two choices, "Leave town now, or face the wrath of my lead."

The bystanders along Main Street stared in silence at the scene unfolding before them. In the tick of a second hand one of the outlaws went for his gun, and before the second hand completed its travel Slo Mo was at work. With her 97, sixguns, and trusty Winchester she blasted the bunch of the outlaws into the county.

Tops was Querida followed by Lucas and Sand Dab Sam.

WILL COONER SAVES WHISKEY SHIPMENT

Stage three

Being a bartender in the Gouge Eye Saloon has its responsibilities, especially with the increased pay the new owners promised him. When word got to town that the latest whiskey shipment was highjacked by some thieves down up in Windser Will mounted his trusty steed and then got on his horse and rode out for Windser. Half-way to Windser Will came upon the wagon train of whiskey.

Riding around to the front of the wagon train Will rode down upon them with guns blazing. After a brief exchange of lead the whiskey thieves gave up and Will was able to return the whiskey shipment.

Ready and Able Anne took first followed by everybody else.

BRUNO BILLY CLEARS OUT RESTURANT!!

Stage four

"This is what I saw," exclaimed Jasper owner and proprietor of Jasper's Deli & Boarding House, "Dice comes in, whooping n hollowing, about how he was going to get the guy who et his pizza. After putt n holes in dang near every piece of furniture in the place, Bruno, who was minding his own business trying to finish his steak, took exception to the bullet that pierced his T-bone. Then all hell broke loose, Bruno gets up and starts shooting back. - and he is mad, I mean real made. Well Dice realizing he's in the wrong place made a hasty retreat with all my other patrons."

Well after the smoke cleared, thanks to his uncanny marksmanship, no-ones was hurt, and he offered to replace all the damaged fixtures. First was Querida in what appears to be a timer mistake, followed by Elk Butt and Win Chester.

SWEET TOOTH ALMOST LOSES MINE ON ONE SPIN OF THE WHEEL.

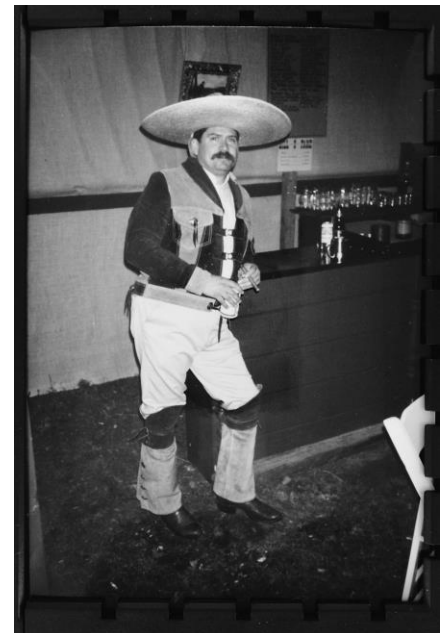

Stage five

Swearing off the horses many years ago, after losing his first stake to a nag that wouldn't have placed if all the other horses died. Sweet Tooth was not tempted, or amused, when asked to bet on Morgun Play's horse, running in the 13th race at Coyote Valley. Fuming from being asked Sweet Tooth stormed into the El Hombre's GAMBLING EMPORIUM for a drink and, maybe, a friendly game of cards.

After a while Sweet Tooth got interested in the famous "Hombre's Wheel of Fortune". It seemed that everybody was a winner (not like that crook Rowdy Yates and his damn dice), so Sweet Tooth sauntered up to the wheel and made a few modest bets, and low and behold he won every one. As the sweat appeared on Morgun Play's brow (a temp hired by El Hombre), Sweet Tooth decided to up the ante, and he put his mine up for collateral. As the wheel slowed to a stop Morgun was seen frantically working a switch behind the bar. Sweet Tooth didn't like these odds and attempted to pull his bet from the table. This brought El Hombre's goons down on Sweet Tooth, forcing him to pull his hogleg and start blazing his way out of the Saloon. With sixgun, shotgun, and rifle Sweet Tooth successfully exited the bar and saved his mining claim.

First was Ready & Able Anne followed by all the rest.

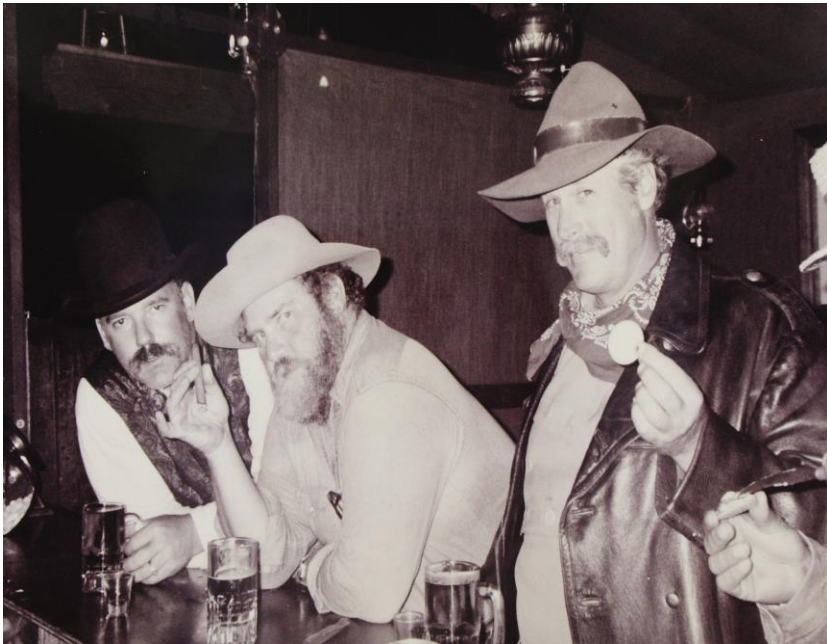

Tres Pinos at the Saloon

WELL THAT'S IT UNTIL NEXT TIME..
