JASPER AND CYRUS WANTED BY U.S. MARSHAL FOR THREATING LIFE OF TAX COLLECTOR AND RESPECTED CITIZEN OF COYOTE VALLEY – WELL MAINLY FOR THE TAX COLLECTOR.

A loud hush fell over the town of Coyote Valley as a still wind blew in from the east and the fading dawn brought hazy light to Main Street. Gunfighters, desperados, gamblers, and carpet baggers had assembled in the town of Coyote Valley following the gold and silver bust in the San Jose Mountain Range. Most of the new arrivals were chomping at the bit for pay back. Not only had their luck run out in the mines but the new owners of the Gouge Eye Saloon were looking to cash in on their tax assessment problem – or have that no good Rowdy Yates shot until dead (he was already hung once and that did not take), and hang the tax assessor.

The new owners of the Gouge Eye, who go by Jasper, and Tres Pinos, are not only in trouble with the law but a new saloon opened up in the Manteca County promising good whiskey and honest women (or was it honest whiskey and good women?). This new establishment, the Lightnin' Bill's Gaming Emporium, promised to rid the territory of disrespectful establishments like the Gouge Eye.

Be that as it may the new owners promised to keep the Gouge Eye open despite the frivolous lawsuits and slanderous allegation. If fact they noted that profits were up since selling surplus whiskey to the Bill's Gaming Emporium. With all the tension in the air no one could guess that the roughest and toughest cowboy of the day would befall that gunfighter Lucas McDennis.

After figuring out this Chabot thing Lucas McDennis, only missing cleaning the event by two shots. Second was Lightnin' Bill followed by Tres Pinos.

JASPER CONFRONTS BANK ROBBERS!!!
Stage one

One usually is in no danger being alone on Main Street in the town of Coyote Valley. But on this past Sunday morning Jasper stood face to face with 33 of the most vicious, nasty, cruel, evil treacherous, unscrupulous, and bad men in the territory (they may have been from Nevada). With only her rifles, shotgun, sixguns and wits, Jasper gave them two choices, "Leave town now, or face the wrath of my lead."

The bystanders along Main Street stared in silence at the scene unfolding before them. In the tick of a second hand one of the outlaws went for his gun, and before the second hand completed its travel Jasper was at work. With his rifles (that's right 2 rifles, 97, and sixguns, she blasted the bunch of the outlaws and they are having a dirt nap.

First was Lightnin' Bill followed by Lucas and Tres Pinos. Jasper gotta 4th.

QUERIDA THWARTS STAGECOACH HOLDUP!!!!

Stage two

Wide was the fame of Querida's Stages and splendid were his goings and comings. Of course she carried matter for Wells Fargo, and so it befell that last Sunday she set out from Chabot on the San Francisco run with six horses, five passengers and $30,000 in minted gold to pay off the mill workers at the end of the haul.

The daylight hours passed pleasantly. The weather was more than clement, the company aboard the stage was entirely masculine and so provided none of the inconveniences to its conduct implicit in female fares, and one of the travelers, Springfield Slim, who was, perhaps by shrewd selection, invited by the driver to share the box, was provided with a square-faced bottle of Jasper's Medford rum from far-off Massachusetts, no common fare in Coyote County.

Not until nightfall, when all his passengers were sleeping soundly under Buffalo robes in the interior of the coach, did Querida think of danger. Then, just before moonrise and as the Concord was climbing the steep reverse curve, known as Bucks curve, there came out of the darkness the accustomed hail and command to "throw down that box."

Without hesitation Querida aimed a swinging blow with his buckskin lash at the near-wheel horse and in the same movement drew her Colt revolver from her cloak. There was a roar as of cannon fire from the Colt. The horses leapt as though the devil was driving, the Concord lurched with terrifying abruptness, and the answering gunfire from the ditch lodged hot lead in the expensive painting on the door representing the Lakes of Killarney in springtime. The passengers cowered on the floor, sharing the remains of the Medford rum, and the entire entourage thundered off into the dark with Wells Fargo treasure intact and no great damage done. Whew, that was quite a stage ride.

The tops in stage one was Lucas followed by Lightnin' Bill, and Tres Pinos. Querida was 4th.

SPRINGFIELD SLIM SALOON OF CARD SHARPS!!

Stage three

While attempting to have a nice quiet faro game, Springfield, named after his mentor Doc Holliday, noticed that Cyrus Sidewinder, was catching a lot of cards from the dealer, Dirty Dog. After two hours of losing bet after bet, Springfield finally figured out that the Dog had a gaffed card box guaranteeing that Cyrus won most of his bets. Following his mentor's teachings Holliday tipped over the faro table and drew down on the would be cheaters. Not wanting to face Judge "Hangin" Bill, Cyrus and the Dog high tailed it out of the saloon followed by Springfield's lead.

Springfield pulled in a 3rd overall – first was Lighnin' Bill then Lucas McDennis

TRES PINOS' S CODE of CONDUCT

In my continuing quest to further mankind I have deciphered more from the divinely dude-centric set of commandments

Rule #56: No guy shall be required to see a "chick" flick.

Rule #124: Owning more firearms than you could possibly use in a lifetime is essential to your well-being. Having to explain why you need another gun could cause massive headaches.

Rule #195: Having reading material in the bathroom is manly unless it's Bride Magazine, or Home Beautiful.

Rule #223: Owning power tools that you may never use is a natural urge, not to be suppressed.

Rule #365: Drinking whiskey, smoking cigars, and gambling are natural desires and should not be suppressed.

Rule #598: Under no circumstances may one man ask another man "Do these pants make my hips look big."

Rule #768: Asking for directions is never required, a man should use their natural hunting instincts, even if it always leads to a topless bar.

CYRUS SIDEWINDER SAVES WHISKEY SHIPMENT

Stage four

Being a bartender in the Gouge Eye Saloon has its responsibilities, especially with the increased pay the new owners promised him. When word got to town that the latest whiskey shipment was hijacked by some thieves down in Manteca so Cyrus mounted his trusty steed and then got on his horse and rode out for Manteca. Half way to Manteca Cyrus came upon the wagon train of whiskey. Riding around to the front of the wagon train Cyrus rode down upon them with guns blazing. After a brief exchange of lead the whiskey thieves gave up and Cyrus was able to return the whiskey shipment.

Cyrus was fourth overall. First was Lucas followed by Springfield Slim and Rowdy Yate.
