RULES!!

Founded by Percy Hallen and Jasper the "Occupy Saloon" movement began when they protested the whiskey price increase imposed by the Howling Wolf saloon. The Howling Wolf was set to charge a nickel for each drink transaction.

Outraged by the added charge, and fearing that the other saloons would follow suit, Percy and Jasper set up their wall tent inside of the Gouge Eye Saloon. Inspired by their actions more cowboys began to set up tents in the saloons along Main Street.

Soon all of the cowboys from the surrounding territories began to arrive at Chabot and make camp in the Saloons.

Gus, the owner of the Howling Wolf demanded that Mayor Longhorn take action and "Rid my Saloon of this rappel!" The Mayor, ever the diplomat, or opportunist, was willing to comply but all of his deputies were camped out in the Saloons, and for a small fee he might be able to get some deputies and get the cowboys out of the Saloon.

Gus, seeing his profits plummet made a healthy contribution to the "Re-elect Longhorn" fund and the Mayor bravely went into the Gouge Eye to confront protesters. Only after several hours did a slightly inebriated Mayor and the rest of the protesters.

Gus, happy for the eventual resolution of the protest reentered his Saloon only to find all of the liquor consumed - perhaps that is why the protest ended.

Thirty cowboys and cowgirls rode into Chabot to engage huge targets with slow small bullets. Primers popped, powder burned, and lead flew (and some his stuff) and when the smoke cleared Gunfer Hire was top gun followed by long-lost Buck, back from his retreat at Niles Canyon Meditation Center.

And many thanks to those who help puttin up and taking down the targets.

JASPER TWO STEPS OUT OF TOWN!!
Stage One

With 32 saloons in town (one for every fifteen men - seems just about right) the town of Chabot boasted having some of the prettiest dance hall girls West of the Mississippi. Jasper was light on his feet when it came to the dance floor, and the saloon girls loved it.

The problem was Jasper was rumored to be "dancing" with a girl from each of the saloons. This came to light last week at the annual Dance Hall Convention and while Jasper was nursing a whiskey 32 ladies made their way down main street to "discuss" this situation.

Word got to Jasper and he made a be-line for a coach at the end of town, and barely got out of town. Some cover fire was necessary because, "damn these women were armed". First was Buck then Gunfer Hire and Flaco.

4-EYE DICK CLEANS UP CROOKED
GAME OF CHANCE!!! Stage Two and Three

The smoke hung low, like a dense fog on the prairie. 4-Eye his back to the wall, looked at the other sitt'n at the table. And wondered if twenty-miles of a railroad would take the pot, which not stood at 600 dollars. Cyrus, his face expressionless, didn't take any cards, Shanghai Kid, with a pile of chips in front of him took one, Gus "Buck" Silver took three muttering something about an inside straight, and the Snake stood pat without looking at his cards.

The final bet was made and the cards were spread out on the table, revealing Cyrus's four of a kind. As he reached over to gather in his chips an Ace slipped out of his sleeve. There was a hushed silence at the table as Cyrus withdrew his hands and tried to explain that the coat used to belong to The Reverend, and he had just picked it up this afternoon.

Before the explanation could clear, his mouth 4-Eye had his rifle at the ready and Cyrus, seeing no percentage in staying, quickly left to find The Reverend. Old 4 Eyes took a 6th and a 10th in both stages. Leapin Otis took 1st in stage two and Gunfer Hire took 1st in stage 3.

BRANDY ROSE CLEANS UP THE TOWN!! Stage four

After a long night in the Saloon playing Texas Hold-em and sipping on Brandy, Brandy Rose was ahead by a pretty large margin. As the last hand was being dealt the table limits were removed so this was all or nothing.

Not trusting the players at the table Brandy kept a close eye on the deal.

When the betting between two of the players started to get high Brandy began to suspect seconds were being dealt. With the betting done Brandy showed to full boat, kings over, and appeared to be beat by another boat with aces over. The only problem was with all the hands showing there was too many aces. Distracting the players with his "bling" he drew "45" and Brandy declared her hand was the "power".

Some confederates of the bent gamblers started to come to the rescue of their covered friends so Brandy let'm have it - with pistol, rifle and shotgun. When the smoke cleared Brandy was indeed the winner.

First was Gunfer Hire followed by Sand Dab and German Bob. Brandy was clean and 8th overall.

CLAIM JUMPERS SPOILED!!!

Stage five

As Potato Kid and Morgan Play lay under the night stars a bunch of claim jumpers swarmed into camp. Pull'n their six shooters five of the bad guys were quickly sent on their way. Reach'n for their sixguns, and making sure those that were just shot were down for good, they went to their Winchester and the other bandits were sent to St. Peter's.

German Bob cleaned the stage in just over 60 seconds. He was followed by Gunfer Hire and Buck. Morgan Play was 5th and the Potato Kid was 7th overall.
